

LAWYER HITS —

"Louis Till died July 2, 1945. A letter of confirmation will follow."

"The letter came a few days later and stated that his death was due to his willful misconduct."

NEVER DID LEARN

Mrs. Bradley never did learn the real story behind her husband's death, the mother said. The widow wrote letters to many sources, including President Truman. Mr. Truman answered, but never gave the cause of death.

The army sent Mrs. Bradley a number of her dead husband's papers, but noted that his "GI" insurance had been cancelled, and she and the son received no money from it.

Being denied any funds from the army, the mother and son had to turn to Social Security for aid. She was allotted $11 a month for herself and $16 a month for the child. She received the sum until she remarried. In 1950 the amount for Emmett was increased to $38.40 a month.

Answer Filed In Louisville Park Segregation Case

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(ANP) — The City of Louisville has denied that racial segregation in city parks is unconstitutional, in a brief filed in Federal Court here. The brief is in answer to a suit to open all parks to Negroes.

Earlier, Judge Roy M. Shelbourne had turned down a motion by the city to dismiss the suit, which was filed in behalf of 11 Negro children last May. No hearing date has been set.

The city says there is no ordinance pertaining to the separate use of parks by Negroes and whites, and says there is no state law requiring segregation.

I know a guy that every time he gets feeling low he goes back to his wife. Makes him appreciate what he had. He goes away again and feels just fine.

until he died.

WORKING TO HELP

Since the father's death Mrs. Spearman has been working to help her daughter and grandson. She said she promised her daughter she would work to help Emmett until he became 18 years old.

She told ANP:

"I have told the truth all the way. Emmett was a good boy who has been reared by me and his mother."

In an editorial under the title "About Till's Father," on the front page, the Jackson Daily News wrote in part:

"The Daily News finds itself in complete agreement with a statement . . . by NAACP attorney William Huff, who said that the circumstances surrounding the death of Emmett Louis Till's father have no bearing on the case pending. The Daily News shares the belief . . . that NAACP embellishments of the true facts in the case were out of place."

" . . . NAACP distortion was just one of many deliberate lies told about the case. It brought much sympathy for Till's mother and for the NAACP cause. No one checked the facts until the Daily News became interested."

"The Daily News would like to find itself in agreement with Negro organizations oftener but before it can do so, the Negro organizations will have to hold the truth in higher regard . . . Let the truth speak for itself. All Missisippians are willing to stand on the facts, if they find a publication outside the South willing to tell them."
